The subsidized advancement program for the unemployed IT professional

Advancing Skills in a Tough Job Market

Enhancing skills through training enables individuals to boost their chances in the current tough job market. A lot of potential employers require job applicants to hold certain certifications; training provides a way to achieve these certifications but it is typically very expensive which makes it difficult for unemployed people to attend. This puts them in a catch 22 situation, can't apply for the job as not certified, and can't afford to do the training to get certified. With this challenge in mind, a collaborative effort between EXIN, itSMF USA, SED-IT, Optimize! New Horizons and the University of Dallas, has led to the creation of a fast-tracked, subsidized advancement program for unemployed IT professionals - the Headway Program.

Aimed at advancing the skills of unemployed IT professionals in these difficult economic times, Headway provides ITIL® and Project Management training at substantially discounted rates.

If you or anyone you know is currently unemployed and is looking for a more affordable way to achieve certification please contact Jeanette Smith at jsmith@practical-itsm.com or by calling 214-682-6322. www.practical-itsm.com/headway

If your organization is interested in supporting the Headway Program, please contact Jeanette Smith, details as above.
